Judith Enck, Former EPA Administrator, Will Speak at Save the Pine Bush Dinner

Judith Enck, former Regional Administrator of Region 2 of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), will be the featured speaker at the Wednesday, June 21 monthly dinner of Save the Pine Bush. The dinner will be held at Westminster Presbyterian Church, 85 Chestnut Street, in Albany (parking available in the lot near the door). Dinner will be served at 6 p.m., and Ms. Enck's presentation will begin at 7 p.m.

Ms. Enck's talk will address "The Trump Assault on Environmental Protection." Having served in senior positions in both state and federal governments, she will share her unique perspective of the Trump Administration's attempts to unravel the bipartisan tradition of environmental protection in this country. She will chronicle the first few months of the Trump Administration and what citizens can and must do to stand up to this unprecedented assault on the environment. After her presentation, Ms. Enck will field questions and hear specific ideas from the audience on what they are doing to address the issues.

Judith Enck has spent her entire career in government working for a clean environment. Until recently, she served as the first Elisabeth Haub Visiting Scholar at Haub Law School at Pace University, and was the longest serving EPA Regional Administrator.
